

MISS BEATRICE CAVIN, Cowichan Station, is another of the stall renters in the old "farmers' market" on Government Street, who is threatened with dispossession. Her father, John Cavin, was one of the original stall renters when the market was opened in 1930. Miss Cavin has continued in the same booth since her father's death in 1942. Between them they never missed a Saturday in 29 years, except the odd time when snow and cold weather prevented them from coming in from the farm with a load of general farm produce. Over the years they paid a rental fee to the Cowichan Agricultural Society. The last two years Miss Cavin has been paying the fee to the Indian Affairs branch, and also a land tax to the City of Duncan.—Leader photo.
