Public Market
Nanaimo to Follow
Duncan

The market has apparently come to stay and week by week a considerable amount of foodstuffs changes hands for cash. Producers and buyers were well satisfied on Saturday last and the usual number of from ten to twenty rigs showed that farmers in the district realize the value of the institution.

It is noteworthy that in every place in the province where a public market has been instituted considerable success has attended the venture. The Nanaimo Farmers' Institute is the latest body to be interested in the project. Duncan market is quoted as a good example near at hand and there is every likelihood that shortly a public market will be established in Nanaimo.
